

LoanServe — Frequently Asked Questions on Applications

Document reference FAQ-GEN-017 · Effective 2025-04-01

Scope and Application

This page answers the questions most often asked before a loan is sanctioned. It is written in plain words for someone who has not yet borrowed, and it does not replace the policies it points to. Where an answer here and a policy disagree, the policy is what binds. Nothing here is product specific unless a product is named.

Application Process

A loan application is acknowledged with a reference number immediately on submission. A complete application is decided within seven working days of document submission. An applicant may hold at most two active retail loan applications at any time.

Status and Documents

Application status can be tracked on the customer portal using the application reference number. Documents may be uploaded through the customer portal in PDF or JPEG format up to 5 MB per file.

After Sanction

A sanction letter is valid for ninety days from the date of issue.

Before You Apply

An applicant may check indicative eligibility on the customer portal without a bureau enquiry being recorded. A formal application records an enquiry with the credit bureau, which other lenders can see. Applying to several lenders in a short period lowers a bureau score and is best avoided. There is no fee for making an application, and any fee payable is disclosed before it is collected.

Documents You Will Need

Every applicant needs proof of identity, proof of address, proof of income and photographs. A salaried applicant needs three months of salary slips and six months of bank statements. A self employed applicant needs two years of filed returns with computation and the financial statements. A secured loan needs the documents for the security in addition to the above.

If Your Application Is Declined

An applicant is told the broad reason for a decline in writing. A decline does not prevent a fresh application once the reason has been addressed. An applicant may obtain the bureau report used in the assessment free of charge once in a financial year. A decline is not reported to the credit bureau, though the enquiry that preceded it is.

Definitions

'Application reference number' means the identifier issued the moment an application is submitted, quoted in every later communication about that application. 'Complete application' means an application accompanied by every document on the checklist handed over at submission.

Exceptions and Discretion

The seven working day timeline runs from a complete application and pauses whenever a document is awaited. The limit of two active applications is not relaxed. A sanction letter that has expired may be revalidated once within thirty days without a fresh application. Any exception is recorded against the application.

Records and Evidence

An application, whether sanctioned or declined, is retained for eight years. Documents uploaded to the portal are retained against the application and are not reused for a later application without consent. An applicant may ask for their application to be withdrawn, and the record is then closed but not deleted.

Regulatory and Compliance Notes

This page follows the fair practices code requirement that the terms of a loan be communicated in a language the borrower understands. The key facts statement is given before acceptance and sets out the rate, the fees and the total amount repayable. An applicant is never asked to sign a blank or incomplete document.

Review and Governance

This page is maintained by the Retail Applications desk and is refreshed whenever the submission checklist changes.
